CJ 241: INTRODUCTION TO COMPUTER SECURITY

This course examines principles and practices of computer and network security. Students will explore common threats to information systems and the methods to prevent or mitigate the threat. Topics include malware, social engineering, application security, network security, data security, cryptography, and network security.

Credits: 3
Department: Criminal Justice