

SOC 260: MEDICINE AND SOCIETY

This course examines health/illness issues as they relate to societal conditions and social identities. Specific topics include social factors and health, the medicalization of life, the interrelationships of health and various social institutions, the health care delivery "system" in the United States, and selected ethical issues in medicine.

Credits: 3

Department: Sociology