

NUR 405: PATHOPHYSIOLOGY

This course allows the student the opportunity to explore the pathophysiologic disruptions in the normal body functioning of individuals across the lifespan. It will include the assessment and analysis of objective and subjective manifestations of common health problems resulting from environmental, genetic, and stress-related maladaptations. Diagnostic assessments will be discussed for each of these disease processes.

Credits: 3

Department: Nursing